Mr. Carnegie agrees water trusts as the International trust conces had taight them, when suddently from the loyal Middle rooters came the boom of the famous "Fight Song." The last line, "Fight Navy, night" did the trick. The Annapolis eleven started off the quarter like a whiriwind, ripped through the Annay defense, and before the period was half over Capt. Dalton stepped back for a try at goal by means of a placement blek. His forwards did their work well. The Army rush line charged like a streak of lightning, realizing only too well what would happen. They met a stone wall. Every man was blocked. Two ends shot in from their positions, but the Navy secondary defense smothered them before they could get within wrecking distance of Dalton and Quarter Back Gitchrist, who was holding the ball. Dalton's skillful too fifted the oval cleanly between the goal posts. The ball shricked through the air and the worl of these mens.
